NUMBER 34.

GEO. W. LANDRAM

SMITHLAND, KENTUCKY, JANUARY 1, 1907.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING:

To the People of the 39 Counties Composing the First Railroad District of Kentucky:

I am a candidate for Railroad Commissioner of this district. I am a Democrat and subject to any action of the Democratic Committee. I was born a Democrat and I have never departed from the faith. I have never scratched or bolted a Democratic nominee.

I was Express Agent for two years; I was Railroad Agent for two years; I was Postmaster for four years and four months, under the second Cleveland administration; I was County Clerk for eight years, and have been Master Commissioner of the Livingston Circuit Court for the past three years, which position I now hold; I am a regular licensed and practicing lawyer. Since my admission to the bar, the docket of the Livingston Circuit Court substantiates my statement that my record as an attorney compares favorably with that of the best lawyers of the Smithland bar, which is the equal of that of any county in Western Kentucky. These duties, all faithfully, honestly and efficiently discharged, warrant me in presuming that the people of the county of my birth believe me fully competent and qualified for the position I ask at your hands.

I performed all these duties myself, single handed and alone, without aid or assistance from anyone; with only a single finger and thumb, will-power and energy, determination and grit, I was enabled to do it. You say you could not do it? Wait until your wife and babies have to depend upon your efforts alone for support, and then you will understand better how I did it. I hope the terrible lessons of misfortune may never be yours, as they have been mine; God forbid and save you from them.

You have the office of Railroad Commissioner in your hands to give to some one; this is New Year's Day, 1907; if you can conscientiously do so, why not give it to me? You will make me deeply grateful, and place me under lasting obligations to you for it.

I will appreciate it, my wife will appreciate it, my nine children will appreciate it. You will, by your vote make 11 souls happy, and the little ones for whom I have labored so long, to rear and educate, as they gather nightly around the fireside will all join in a blessing for you in their little prayers.

The future can only be judged by the past, and as I have never yet in all the 47 years of my past life proved recreant to any duty or trust imposed on me, under any and all circumstances, misfortunes and conditions, I promise you now, sincerely and earnestly, that if honored by you in this important position, that the best efforts of my life shall be devoted to making you a faithful, courageous and efficient officer, and that you will never have cause to regret having supported me.

If, on investigation, you find me honest, worthy and competent, and inasmuch as you must bestow this office upon some one, and you cast your vote for me, the 1600 Democrats of old Livingston county will join with me in thanking you and blessing you for your favor.

When you have read this, please hand it to your wife and let her and the whole family read it; and then do me the favor to tuck it on your gatepost or in some other conspicuous place, so that if my candidacy results disastrously to me, it may possibly be an inspiration to some one whose life, perhaps, has been filled with sadness and misfortune as mine has.

I hope to see you personally before the convention or primary, but should I fail to do so, please remember that I have you in mind, and that I want your vote and influence, and do not forget to go to the convention or primary and do all you can for me. Write me conditions in your county.

Wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year, I beg to remain,

Yours Truly
Geo. W. Landram

Mission of Mercy to Stricken Kingston Comes to End

YOUR SERVICES NOT NEEDED

Says Governor Swettenham in a Very Sarcastic Letter and Asks Admiral Davis to "Skiddoo"

Official Act Greatly Deplored by Many Residents.—Americans Render Valuable Assistance

AMERICAN WARSHIPS ALL SAIL AWAY

Kingston, Jamaica, Sat. Jan. 19.—Rear Admiral Davis' mission of mercy to stricken Kingston came to an abrupt and painful end today in consequence of Gov. Swettenham's objection to the presence of American sailors engaged in the work of clearing the streets, guarding property and succoring the wounded and sick, culminating in a letter to the Admiral peremptorily requesting him to re-embark all parties that had been landed.

Admiral Davis was greatly shocked and paid a formal visit to Gov. Swettenham today, informing him that the United States battleships Missouri and Indiana and the gunboats Yankton would sail this afternoon.

To the Associated Press Admiral Davis said that the immediate compliance with Gov. Swettenham's request was the only course consistent with the dignity of the United States.

The friction between the Governor and the Admiral began with the arrival of the American war vessels, when the Governor objected to the firing of a salute in his honor on the ground that the citizens might mistake the firing for a new earthquake. He also declared there was no necessity for American aid—that his government was fully able to preserve order, tend the wounded and succor the homeless.

Rear Admiral Davis, however, landed parties of blue jackets, who patrolled the streets, cleared the debris, razed ruins, attended many of the wounded and won the highest praise from citizens and military officers for excellent work.

On the afternoon of the salute incident Rear Admiral Davis wrote Gov. Swettenham and offered an apology for the mistake of the salute. He stated in his letter that he landed working parties from both ships to give aid generally to suffering humanity and that he proposed landing parties on the morrow for the same purpose unless the governor expressly did not desire it and trusted he would justify him in this work of humanity. He also stated that a patrol of six men had been sent on shore to guard and secure the archives of the United States consulate and after completing their work had assisted the native police in capturing some thieves and recovering from them a safe valued at $5,000. Admiral Davis said he would take pleasure in meeting Gov. Swettenham at the hour.

Gov. Swettenham replied Friday in a very sarcastic letter and thanked Admiral Davis for his assistance and told him in no unmistakable terms that his services were no longer needed and that the patrol had no right to assist the native police in running

16 KILLED OR BURNED IN RAILROAD WRECK

Engineer Runs Past a Red Light at Fowler, Ind.

CRASH WITH FREIGHT TRAIN

Block System Fails to Work Once More and Many Human Beings are Sacrificed in Dreadful Collision

And as Usual in Such Accidents, Fire Follows and Charred Bodies are Found in Profusion

PRESIDENT'S CAR ATTACHED TO TRAIN

Fowler, Ind., Jan. 19.—At least sixteen persons were crushed or burned to death early today in a collision of the C. C. C. & St. L. railroad, between the "Queen City Special," which left Chicago at 11:30 o'clock last night, and a freight train. Ten persons were seriously injured and several badly hurt.

The passenger train was running at a speed of fifty miles an hour, and consisted of a combination coach, two Pullman sleepers for Cincinnati, one sleeper for Indianapolis, and a Big Four private car, No. 401, occupied by Mrs. C. E. Schaft, wife of the president of the railroad. The entire train was burned except the private car and the Indianapolis sleeper.

Seven of the dead have been identified. Eleven of the victims were burned to death in the combination coach, and just two of them have been identified, as the bodies were almost entirely consumed by the flames. With one exception every member of the train crew perished.

None of the passengers in the sleepers suffered serious injury. The collision occurred 500 feet from a switch near this place. The passenger train in a heavy fog ran by a telegraphic block signal to stop. The red light was not obeyed.

The engine and tender of the combination coach caused a mass of wreckage under which the passengers in the car were wedged.

Mrs. Schaft turned over her car to the injured and five of them were later returned in it to Kankakee.

The crash came in the dark. The noise awakened nearly every person in Fowler.

Wrecking crews began arriving after daylight. The debris was still burning. The tender had crushed entirely thru the combination coach, and the two engines were locked together in a tangled mass of steel. Coroner Comley superintended the removal of the bones of the identified dead, and took charge of the bodies. This afternoon enough fragments to make eight bodies had been taken out.

It is probable the exact number of victims will never be known, but the number may reach twenty-five.

A Cincinnati brakeman on the train was the only member of the train crew that escaped.

The freight train was badly damaged. Ten cars were thrown down an embankment and merchandise was scattered along the tracks. On account of the blockade trains were detoured for Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Chicago during the afternoon.

Considerable surprise was manifested by most every one Monday morning when it became known that Henry Woods had sold his interest in the Woods & Orme drug store to J. Huston Orme.

Mr. Woods is undecided as to what he will do, but has several propositions in view. He has been confined quite closely for several years and is taking a few days of much needed rest.

Mr. Orme will conduct the business with the assistance of Bruce Babb.

United States Not Following in the Footsteps of Ancient Rome

By MISS ANNIE DEAN

Argument by Miss Annie Dean at Morganfield in the debate between Marion and Morganfield High School, Nov. 23, 1906.

HONORABLE JUDGES, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

To-night I wish to give you some few reasons why I do not think the United States is following in the footsteps of ancient Rome.

We have entrusted the work of creating and developing a great federal government to the common people and to-day our republic is the center of the world with the Occident on our right and the Orient on our left.

Of what does this glory of America consist? It is not in her commerce and her merchandise; it is not in her vast extent of territory, nor the strength of her arms; America's glory and strength consists in the education of her masses. Our educational system is at the root of our power as a nation.

From the landing of the pilgrim fathers and the dashing cavaliers, the aim of America has been to have none but an educated citizenship. Her public schools offer opportunities for an education to the very poorest child, and they not only make the people intelligent and capable of self government, they make them patriotic and liberty loving. They develop in the masses a sobriety of judgment which is above all bribes and trickery. In short, the public schools lift the whole people above party cries and chicanery and plant in every heart a desire for right and a love of liberty.

Our colleges foster ideals and not only drill but create; our Universities by permitting liberty of choice, allow every form of talent to receive proper culture, and of all great institutions of learning, Harvard, Yale and Princeton, not only offer the regular courses in mathematics, science and English, but even are offering special courses in diplomacy, statecraft and insurance.

The United States too realizes that it is not by forms of government that men are made or unmade; that it is by the character of their wives and mothers and in America a generous education is the heritage of every daughter of the republic as well as of every son. This higher education of woman means higher standards of manhood, greater intelligence and better men.

When the United States assumed the responsibility of protecting Cuba she immediately planted her system of education there. And note the result. The Cubans are far better educated today than when we began to educate them in 1899. When we purchased the Philippines, we immediately began to educate the people.

This is what the system of American education is and has been. Surely then our Republic is not in danger from the educational standpoint! Why then is the United States following after ancient Rome? The United States is not following after any government toward ruin, but leading them all toward prosperity. Rome had not a single public school, we have hundreds. Only her richest youths received the advantages of the courses of Oratory and Rhetoric taught in the few schools of her imperfect system. The Roman girl was taught only obedience and seclusion; the American girl is educated, intelligent and accomplished. Rome held the classes which the United States takes greatest pride in educating, not only in ignorance and superstition, but in the fetters of slavery. All men are now free in the United States.

You say the United States expands. Rome expanded and Rome fell, and why? Because she never dreamed of our system of education. She made her subjects slaves in ignorance and chains; we educate them. She degraded the learned and brave Greeks of her conquered provinces to common laborers and drudges; we make of the half civilized Filipinos an educated people, capable of self-government. She pillaged and devastated their country; we give them modern improvements. Rome trod the path to ruin with steady step; the United States speeds along the path of glory and future prosperity as an educated people, a united people, a free people.

Not only does the United States have the advantage of Rome in her system of education but also in religion. For many years the Roman empire lay buried in idolatry. The American republic has always been blessed with Christianity. For centuries the Romans worshipped numerous divinities. Americans have ever worshipped Almighty God. Rome was the scene of religious persecutions. America is the birthplace of religious freedom. When Christianity was first introduced in the Roman empire the people were governed by authority, machinery, and systematic creed. Americans have ever been governed by the dictates of conscience. The U. S. received her religion indirectly from Rome but so improved upon the ancient system that the two faiths are almost entirely different. The Romans were wicked and brutal; Americans are religious and virtuous. Romans delighted in the horrors of the Amphitheatre; Americans find solace and hope in the teachings of the pulpit and the mission. Indifference to religion is an invitation to depotism, but Americans are not indifferent.

The United States is further today from the path of ruin trod by ancient Rome than ever before in her history. Never was the government so completely in the hands of the people. Never did the government show such strength as has been recently manifested. The general moral uprising that now sweep over our land are purifying and strengthening the very heart of our nation. The recent investigation made by Congress and the President are but proof that the government is still in the hands of the people and more entirely in their hands than ever before. Laws have been passed to protect the people.

The railroads are permitted to grant no special rates to favor shippers, and are compelled to keep open books. The pipe lines of the great Standard Oil Co. have been made common carriers; the methods of insurance have been revised and placed on a firm basis; carpenters, plumbers and whitewashers are busy making sanitary improvements in the packing houses. Such greed, graft as exists in our country is all on the surface. Our officers dare to expose and punish all crime; our Congress dares to send one of its own number to the penitentiary with a life sentence because he was guilty of graft. Out of eighty millions of people some few Americans are thieves and murderers, some few are dishonest and dishonorable, but the men who control the government are men who are honest and honorable, tried and true, men who stand like a pillar of stone against the wrong. In Rome not so. Her laws were for the few, her government, for the politicians, her officials, corrupt and wicked, thieves and murderers, men who oppressed and slaughtered the people. Who is the Sulla of America? Not even the vilest murderer will own to the name. Have we a Marius or a Catiline? No. America's officials relieve the people of oppression and safeguard to the masses their rights.

It is a symptom of intellectual and moral vigor to see so much investigation as is now seen on every hand. The prosperous condition of our laboring classes is an indication of our future prosperity. They are protected and given fair wages where in Rome they were slaves. Compare if you will the American wage-earner living in a home of his own, with food and clothing in plenty, with domestic happiness the master of his labor, and in the enjoyment of his political franchise, to the ragged, half-starved Roman slave, robbed of his political rights, trampled upon by a tyrannical master, spurned and spat upon by all and thrown into the Amphitheatre to feed the ravenous beasts and his master's desire for enjoyment. Compare, I say, such conditions existing toward the laboring classes, and then can you say that the United States is following in the footsteps of ancient Rome? No, one policy leads to prosperity, the other to ruin and destruction.

The United States shows another symptom which points to her future prosperity, the accumulation of wealth in her own territories. Her mercantile wealth cannot threaten her while it remains so entirely under the benign constraint of religion. Such wealth beautifies society and advances her great philanthropic enterprises. This wealth has delivered the oppressed and saved the Republic, and has filled our counties and cities with schools of learning, galleries of art, halls of justice and temples of piety. Not a few of our millionaires have made and are still making liberal and beneficent use of their wealth. In America the makers of fortune are workers, not men who rely upon the labor of others, but on their own toil, and they seldom spend in luxury what they have made by toil and thrift. Such was not the case in Rome. The whole wealth of the empire was in the hands of a few and was spent only in luxury, not for improvements. The rich were extremely wealthy and there was no middle class. The poor were bound as slaves. Such conditions can never be possible in the "land of the free." The President is now advocating an inheritance tax upon the wealth of the rich and such a tax bids fair to become a law. This gives to the people control over the money of its millionaires.

As the security of refinement, wealth is the feeder of all those arts that enable and beautify life. The Roman government spent vast wealth in erecting great arches and columns as memorials of her Emperors; the United States spends her money for the good of her people. Rome revelled in luxury, the United States in comfort. The moral conscience of the Roman was blunt, and so unaffected by wrong as to leave evils unpunished; the American moral conscience is so acute as to expose the slightest wrong.

Rome maintained such privileges as to create men whose god was money. By her system of education and instruction in morals the United States creates men whose aim, purpose and exertions inspire honesty, truthfulness and patriotism in the hearts of all people.

The strength of our Republic rests on an invisible and ideal base and is developed out of mental and moral resources; the strength of the Roman empire rested on a corrupt and decayed foundation and was developed out of the brute force of her arms.

Little Greece resisted the flood of Persian arms and at last conquered the East because there was no vitality more courage, genius, enthusiasm--in her people than in the swarming myriads which the bulk of the Persian empire enclosed. Rome, too, rose to power by the despotic sway of character, not legions. When Rome fell she had more troops and fortifications than in the height of her supremacy. But she lost her real and invisible strength that of temperance, hardihood, valor, moral soundness; internal dissensions, luxury and bad government had unnerved her and today she exists only in song and story, the prosperity and hopes of the United States lean on the moral bond of truth, valor, justice and hardihood which binds the North and South East and West together, for the common purpose of thwarting internal dissensions and preserving the temperance and moral soundness of the government.

United by such a bond, with schools to intensify patriotism, with officers who set the example of pride in their country and with men who are ready at the first trumpet call to advance for their Country's defense, who can predict the grandeur of America's future? With sons whose patriotism is intensified by faithfulness, with daughters whose love of country bids them send forth father, husband or brother to bleed and die, if need be, for the land that gave them birth, with boundless resources, thousands of public schools, with citizens and moral soundness, who can fathom America's outlook? As the settlement of Plymouth is to the United States so are the United States to the future possession and control of the world which is to be.

Not by the sway of legions and armies, but by possessing moral and intellectual strength will the United States disarm the armies of Europe and set before the world the example of an educated and free people. Like a bright and happy youth burdened with the latent possibilities, she goes forth as a grand and glorious example of freedom and education to the masses; and she shall live as the grandest nation of the globe! Shall live as the Republic of Washington! Long live our country, not the home of the slave and the oppressed, but the land of the free and the home of the brave, the birthplace of freedom, the cradle of liberty!

Long live the United States now in her youth. She stands forth erect, clothed in robes of majesty, and power, in which the God who made her intends that she shall henceforth tread the earth; and today she is moving down the great highways of history, teaching by example, moving at the head of the procession of the world's events, marching in the van of civilized and christianized liberty, her manifest destiny to light the torch of liberty, till it illumines the entire pathway of the world, and till human freedom and human rights become the common heritage of mankind.

Most of them are maintained with the intention of evading the laws of both countries, especially in the sale of spirituous liquors. One of the most noted of these is located near Fort Covington. The boundary line runs diagonally through the store and split the bar right half in two. When a customer appears the bartender sets the bottle on his side of the boundary line, and the patron draws it across the counter, thereby taking it out of the country, which relieves the bartender of any fault.

The proprietor of this place is a genial fellow who has been conducting his business for twenty years without interruption. In order to secure a conviction the Government making the prosecution must have accurate survey made, and prove beyond doubt just the exact spot where each bottle was placed. That this is almost an impossibility the Government of both countries have found to their sorrow on several occasions.

The goods on the shelves of the store are kept on the side belonging to the country where they are bought. In the course of a day hundreds of dollars' worth of merchandise is disposed of, both from Canada and part from America. The proprietor commands a large trade and secures a larger profit than ordinary merchants doing business on either side of the line. He does not insist upon his customer telling him where they are from, merely requiring that they pay cash and take there purchase away with them.

Little attempt is made by the officials to stop the traffic, for the reason that it almost impossible to prove just where the goods were bought. A variation of one are two inches in where a customer was standing would change the whole status of any given case. However, there was one occasion when the Canadian Government secured a conviction. A careless clerk left a can of American spices on the Canadian side of the counter for a minute while he turned his back to do something else. Just then a Canadian customs officer happened in and found the dutiable goods on the Queen's domain. For this one instance carelessness on the part of his clerk, the proprietor had to pay a fine of $20.

The twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis are the result of a peculiar geographical conditions. They are both located in Minnesota, are within ten miles of each other, and are connected by street car lines belonging to the same company. The separation of these cities is due to the Falls of St. Anthony. St. Paul is the oldest and was established below the Falls for the convenience of shippers. Minneapolis was located above them to take advantage of the water power.

The first reasons for locating the Twin Cities still predominate, one being a jobbing town and the other a manufacturing center. Minneapolis is the largest, but St. Paul is the

Nervous Worn-Out

If you are in this condition, your nerve force is weak—the power is giving out, the organs of your body have "slowed up," and do their work imperfectly. This failure to do the work required, clogs the system and brings distress and disease. When the nerves are weak the heart is unable to force the life-giving blood through your veins; the stomach fails to digest food; the kidneys lack power to filter impurities from the blood, and the poisonous waste remains in the system to breed disease. Nerve energy must be restored. Dr. Miles' Nervine will do it, because it strengthens the nerves; it is a nerve medicine and tonic, that rebuilds the entire nervous system.

"Several years ago I was all broken down. I was nervous, worn-out, could not sleep, and was in constant pain. I doctored for months, and finally the doctor said he could do nothing for me. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and used altogether eight bottles, and I became strong and healthy, and now weigh 170 pounds." H. C. CUNNINGHAM, 108 Ellsworth Ave., Allegheny, Pa.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit you. If it fails, he will refund your money.

Some Peculiarities of Our Wonderful Country

MISSISSIPPI IS CITYLESS

There is a County in Texas With Only Four Inhabitants

UNIQUE SITUATIONS OVER BOUNDARIES

One day, while I was riding across Texas, several passengers on the train began talking about the gigantic Lone Star State. One man said: "A novel way to demonstrate the enormity of this great commonwealth is to spread out a map of the United States, stretch a string across Texas the longest way, then, placing one end of your measure on Chicago, you will find that the other end will extend into either the Atlantic ocean or the Gulf of Mexico." Try this experiment to satisfy yourself.

The two largest counties in the United States are Custer county, Mont., and San Bernardino county, Cal. Each of these is a little more than 20,000 square miles in extent, and the four States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey could be put inside the boundaries of either of them. The smallest county in the Union is Bristol county, R. I. which has only twenty-five square miles. The country in the United States having the largest population is New York, which has more than 2,000,000 people in it. At the time of the last census Baylor county, Tex., which is about as large as Rhode Island, had only four inhabitants.

The largest block in any American city is located in Watertown, N. Y. This municipal freak is a row of business houses nearly five squares long without a break in it. It contains the offices and stores of 145 different firms, forty-five tenants. The total valuation of the property in this monster block is almost $1,000,000.

The longest street in the United States, and in the world as well, is Western avenue, Chicago. This remarkable thoroughfare is exactly twenty-two miles long. Its nearest rival is Halsted street, also in Chicago, which is but two-thirds of a mile shorter. Halsted streets is so much closely built up that it is usually spoken of as the longest street in the world. By traversing its length one may see all the outward indications of the varying phases of American life, from the hovels of outcast sin to the gilded palaces of pork-packing millionaires. Interspersed with the natives Americans on this one are six distinct colonies where the people speak other languages than English, namely, Germans, Italians, Russian-Jews, Bohemians, Poles and Greeks. Halsted street is cross over and under by twenty railroads. It is estimated to be the chief business center and place for 175,000 people, more than there are in any one of four of our States, viz.: Arizona, Idaho, Nevada or Wyoming. About fifty miles from Durango, Col., there is a point where four States corner. At this place by stepping a few feet in either direction one can walk in four different Commonwealths in as many seconds. These States are Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona. A nearly parallel case is at Harper's Ferry, where the train stops a few minutes to allow the passengers to alight and enjoy a view which permits them to look into three States—Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The highest and lowest elevation in this country are in California, within one hundred miles of each other. The loftiest is Mt. Whitney, 14,499 feet high, and the lowest is Death Valley, about 450 feet below the level of the sea. Two Oceans pass, in Yellowstone Park, is so named because whenever there is a shower in the vicinity and a certain small creek overflows, its waters spread out over the edge of the continental divide and pass into tributaries of rivers, part of which flow to the Atlantic and the other to the Pacific ocean.

There are a number of cases where unique situations have developed in cities that happened to be divided by State lines. These oddities are the result of differences in law. The boundary between Texas and Arkansas runs along the main street Texarkana, and formerly if a fight occurred on the side of the street, the combatants merely had to cross to the other sidewalk to be out of the jurisdiction of the authorities governing the territory where the disturbance had taken place. The two sides of Texarkana did not develop equally, because the administration of one State was more enterprising than the other.

Bristol is located on the State line between Tennessee and Virginia. One of these States has a regulation preventing colored people from occupying the same street car seats with whites, and the has not, consequently the colored people have merely to stay on one side of the car, on the boundary street, to sit where they please. The dividing line between Missouri and Kansas is State street in Kansas city. Missouri is wet and Kansas is dry, so one side of that particular avenue is literally lined with "First and Last Chance" saloons. This locality is supposed to have been the birth place of this original form of saloon advertisement.

North Dakota has a prohibition law and Minnesota has not. The Red river of the north is the boundary, and it separates the two towns of Fargo and Morehead. Each saloonkeeper in Morehead has a little buckboard, and these vehicles are sent for anyone on the other side of the river who wants a drink. When citizens of Fargo begin to have a dry feeling in his throat he merely telephones the bartender who keeps his favorite brand of liquor, and low and behold, he is given a free ride both ways for the price of his drink! Such enterprise is certainly novel if nothing else.

Undoubtedly the most extraordinary boundary complications are those resulting from what are known as the international stores. These places are scattered all along the line between the United States and Canada from Vancouver to New Brunswick, most important from a political standpoint, especially in its relation to North Dakota. This state has two parallel lines of railroad running across it, but only one intersecting line. Consequently it is easier for North Dakotans to get to St. Paul than to any part of their state, so that city witnesses the deliberations of most of their politicians.

Mississippi is unique in that it is one of the old states of the Union which has no city. Memphis, Tenn., is the metropolis for the northern part of Mississippi, and New Orleans, La., serves a like purpose for the southern part of the State.

I gladly recommend it as a fine medicine for Dyspepsia." Woods & Orme.

THURSDAY, JAN. 24, 1907.

If J. Peirpont Morgan has really quit work it's a sure sign there is no more loose money in the world.

The world uses 170,000,000,000 matches yearly and yet you find fellows who say "gimme a light."

The Chicago Council has demanded of the Illinois Legislature the death penalty for criminal assaults on women.

The question before the public is: Can the Pure Food Law save life fast enough to make good the losses in railroad accidents?

JOHN R. WALSH, the big Chicago banker, railroad builder and former newspaper publisher, has been indicted in Chicago by a Federal grand jury in connection with the collapse of the National bank of which he was president.

The most up-to-date way to commit suicide is to buy a railroad ticket for a hundred mile trip and attempt to ride it out—piff—paff—pouff and it's all over.

In a circular addressed to the public served by the Southern Railway Company, President W. W. Finley says that during the last twelve years the company has expended or contracted to expend $96,482,945 for improvements. A little more expended would not hurt the condition of the said company's road-bed.

You cannot become a physician, a lawyer, or an engineer until you deliberately make up your mind that you can. How can you expect to become a free, harmonious, healthy man unless you overcome the conviction that you are so handicapped by hereditary influence that you cannot do much if you try? You must start out with the same conviction of your ability to free yourself and to put yourself in a position to succeed in life as you do when you start out in a vocation—with a determination to surmount all obstacles and to prepare yourself thoroughly for your life-work, no matter what stands in the way.

OUR silk bill on exclusively New York imports is about $2,000,000 week. This silk is used to a great part by the females of our country and then there is the Easter Bonnets. No wonder the men go broke.

From the recent railroad disasters caused by the block system failing to work we are ready to declare the said system on the "bum." The latest disaster occurred near Fowler, Ind., and sixteen were killed and many injured.

Appellate Court Sustains Judge Carnes

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 18.—The Court of Appeals refuses to grant a writ against Special Judge William S. Carnes to prevent him from holding the trial of James Hargis.

Judge Carnes is sustained by the Appellate Court in all his rulings excepting only his refusal to draw witnesses from the jury wheel. This, the court holds, should have been done.

Hilarious Hysterics.

An amusing story comes from an exchange while it relates to a comedy and may be spurious, it's worth repeating since it now has local significance. A town character known as Hick Henderson, a subject to violent hiccoughs, especially after imbibing freely of beer, is a resident of a certain western town. A comedy of renown, known as Hooligan's Troubles—and really good, was announced to appear at the local theatre. Two of the town reporters anticipating the fun of getting Hick slightly heered up to the show and getting him to hiccoughing loudly, possibly between acts, provided themselves with three tickets and invited him to attend, but in getting him in condition, they imbibed in gleeful anticipation of the fun and got an unusual load themselves. But they got there. The fun, of course, was fast and furious, and they all got to laughing and finally roaring, when unexpectedly at the termination of the awful funny Jit-Ju crazy dance, by Hooligan, Jones, the friend, went into hysterics—his friend followed, hiccoughs suit, and Hick had to get them them both out into the open air to prevent a riot in the gallery. The Hooligan Trouble Co., in Hooligan's Troubles, appear here at the Marion Opera House Monday night Jan. 28th. It is to be hoped there will be no Hies or Hicks in the audience.

A Quartette Instead of Trio.

W. B. Yates, the sweet voiced singer of Sheridan, who was the happy father of a new arrival last Thursday week, informs us that its now the Yates Quartette instead of "Trio" as he has also a fine girl at his home born in 1905. We beg pardon, in hereafter will be called the quartette instead of the trio.

TERRIFIC RAIN AND WIND STORM.

Visited Marion Last Saturday Evening
And Considerable Damage in the Community.

POWER HOUSE SMOKE STACK DOWN.

Saturday evening about 5 o'clock a storm which almost took on the dignity of a hurricane and water-spout visited Marion. The wind attained a velocity of forty miles an hour and the rain fell in blinding sheets which soon flooded the streets and filled the gutters to overflowing. The down pour continued for an hour and the wind blew a gale.

Considerable damage was done here and elsewhere in the vicinity in the way of timber being blown down. The greatest damage done in Marion was at the power house of the Marion Electric Light & Ice Co., where the giant smoke stack, sixty feet high, was blown down and partially demolished. In falling it struck the roof at one place and broke a rafter just over the dynamo. It also knocked the corner of the brick fire wall off at the east corner of the building. Superintendent Dollar was at supper, and as the night engineer and electrician had not come on duty, Lester Paris, the assistant was there alone. He was considerably alarmed but did not close down the plant, but kept the lights going.

A large force of men Sunday morning with derrick and pulleys put back in position that part of the stack which was not demolished and it will be made to do duty until a brick one can be constructed.

Jolly House Party.

The Misses Scott, on the South Side, will welcome a jolly house party at their home this morning. They will be the Misses Naoma Frund, of Vincennes, Ind., Sue Frith, of Ft. Logan, Denver, Col. Julia Poynter, of Shelbyville and Mrs. Robert Haynes, of Marion, Ky.—Frankfort State Journal.

Mrs. T. E. Griffith was in the city Wednesday night of last week with her daughter, Miss Alice, who left for Sharon, Pa., to enter a school for nurses, on the mid-night train Wednesday night. Miss Alice has decided to be a trained nurse and will complete the course under the auspices of the Red Cross Society. She spent several days in Chicago visiting relatives before proceeding to Sharon.

No Danger On The Cumberland

Capt. J. S. Tyner, of the steamer Butteroff, and one of the best posted men of the Cumberland, today, said to a reporter for The News-Democrat: "While the Cumberland is coming up with a jump in the upper end she is low in the middle and fight only from back water in the lower end. Why, there is back water clear to Dover 100 miles from the mouth and it is like running on a lake."

"Now the water coming down from Burnside will spread and a big rise in the head waters will not amount to a dipperful by the time the Ohio is reached."

Walker-Crowell.

Mr. Bert Walker, son of J. M. Walker, was married last Sunday morning at 9 o'clock to Miss Belva Crowell at the home at the groom in the Iron Hill section, Rev. W. T. Oakley officiated.

Miss Crowell has lived in the home of the groom's parents for several years and is a most deserving and attractive young woman.

The groom is a farmer and owns his own home and the happy couple have gone to house keeping.

Mrs. Hard who was Miss Oliver, daughter of Forest Oliver of Frances section, is one of the county's most attractive young matrons. DROWNED IN MISSISSIPPI.

Charlie the Seventeen Year-Old Son of
W. T. Bennett Drowned Saturday Jan. 19th.

The town of Fredonia was shocked Saturday by a telegram being received by S. C. Bennett that his grandson, Charlie Bennett was drowned at his home in Chritten Mississippi January 19th while attempting to cross the backwater in a small boat. He was sitting in the front end of the boat with his gun in his hand watching for game along the bank while a companion was paddling the boat, and in some way lost his balance and fell into the water overturning the boat. He was a splendid swimmer, but the cold water overpowered him and he sank before help could reach him. His companion being closer to the shore managed to escape.

The remains were brought to Fredonia for interment, accompanied by the deceased father W. T. Bennett and Grand-father, C. F. Webber.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist church Sunday evening at 2:30 and was attended by a large crowd of friends and relatives; the services were conducted by the pastor Rev. M. E. Miller, assisted by Rev. J. S. Henry, of Marion, Ky., and the body was laid to rest in the new cemetery at Fredonia, Ky.

AMONG OUR CHURCHES.

The celebration of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the Presbyterian church next Sunday. There will be preparatory services Thursday and Friday night at 7 o'clock, and Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Last Sunday Rev. Andres preached a sermon on the doctrine of God. It was based on the following text, Deu. 6:4 "The Lord our God is one Lord." This sermon was an exposition of the Westminster Standards on this subject. The description of God in the Shorter Catechism is the most complete found in any document of theological thought. God is a Spirit, infinite, eternal and unchangeable, in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth. There is but one only, the living and true God. There are three persons in the Godhead; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit; and these three are one God, the same in substance, equal in power and glory.

The sermon was concluded with a few practical remarks on man's relation to God.

Rev. J. F. Price will preach at Dixon next Sunday.

The Bible class at the C. P. church had an interesting meeting last Sunday. It will meet the first and third Sunday afternoons. The next lesson will be Gen. X—XIV, chapters inclusive; also the study of Job. Read the lesson closely and attentively before coming to the meeting of the class.

MRS. O'SHAUGHNESSY WRITES.

Mr. Editor of the Tribune: "Wid wan av the greatest deloights in me loife Oi tek me pen in hand to drop ye a few lines to let ye know Oi'm in excellent health, barrin' a bad cold in me head an' an awful toothache, an' Oi hope this will find yees enjoyin' the same blessings.

Oi had a dhrame on Chusday night which was not all a dhrame, an' it is on me moind that bad thot Oi must tell ye av it.

Oi dhramed that me an' Moike was kaping av a small store an' Moike died an' wint to Heaven, an' av course Moike an' me being wan, as His Holy Riverance tould us, Oi wint with him.

There do be a great crowd an' jam before the Heavenly gate loike McGuire's old postoffice on Sundays, so while Oi do be waitin' for Moike to take his turn Oi climbed upon a pile av brick an' stone where they do be repairin' th' peatly gates to keep out delegates to the constitutional convention, an' such a foim sight never before me eyes. They wor people there from the four inds av the airth, an' there wor naygurs besoids which wasn't what Oi expected, an' they wor ridin' in a horse an' a carriage, an' a pickin up gold in the shtrreets, an' there wor pigs an' pertaties every where.

Soon Moike's turo kum an' sez St. Peter, a pullin' his beard an' lookin' wiselike over his spectacles, like Harris & Son, the livery stable mon: "Whin did ye die an' where from?"

"Me name is Moike O'Shaughnessy an' Oi've been kaping av a small store djist fernist the XX ranch in in th' Osage Reservation, an' Oi died las' night," sez St. Peter.

Me ould mon Moike, being a rael gentilemaa, an' and a Dinnierat an' from the Osage country besoids, would shand for nothin' loike that so he ups wid his shillelah to give St. Peter a crack on the noggin, an' knowin' how by St. Peter wud look whin Moike got through wid him Oi told him to desist, thin St. Peter sez, sez he:

"Oi tek the People's Tribune, an' the Capital, an' Journal, an' Fairfax Chief, an' Foraker Tribune, an' Ray-publian, an' Oi rade ivery wan av thim from the tittle in the front to th' Western Newspaper Union's trademark in the back, an' niver wast have Oi seen yez name in the advertiseing columns. Dead min don't advertise so it's yerself av has been dead a long time. Whin yez was born the fir-st toime yez cried it was an advertisement for something to ate. An' on down through loife yez have bragged how yez would settle the tariff, an' the money question, an' the naygurs, an' the furrin policy, while sittin' on the dhry goods box in front av yez store but such advertin' did not impress people wid yez greatness. Printed advertisements is th' blarney stone as catches trade an' if the Midland Valley don't bring papers wid yez ad, the Katy or th' Santa Fe will an' O'll shure see it. The printed Bible is a foine influential adverteisement av this summer raysort an' if yez hadn't read it yez would have come no further than Hogarty saloon's. Our guests are all brainy advertisers. Te'll wid ye," sez he.

So Moike tuk up his carpet bag full av his winter clothing an' sharted for the bad place an' av course, Moike an' me being wan, Oi wint with him.

Th' road was so long an' the day so hot Oi thought we'd never get there. There wor thorns, an' thistles, an' brambles, an' cactus ivery where, an' centipedes as long as me arm an' tarantulas as big as a tub. The road was thot rocky it was twenty times as bad as the Nelogany road in Billy Wells' stage coach. After a long travel we got so close Oi could hear the cussin' an' shwearin' an' smell the foire an' the brinestone an' thin Oi woke up. It was only Moike a shwearin' for he kem nome late from the directors' meetin' an' hung his trousers on the chair fernist the stove an' they caught foire an' dropped on his new boots an' burned them up.

Oi run an' hugged Moike an' sez: "It's glad Oi am ye'r not dead, Moike" an' he sez, sez he: The devil fly is not necessarily one of perfect form and features. Many a plain woman who could never serve as an artist's model, possesses those rare qualities that all the world admires: neatness, clear eyes, clean smooth skin and that sprightliness of step and action that accompany good health. A physically weak woman is never attractive, not even to herself. Electric Bitters restore weak women, give strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvet skin, beautiful complexion. Gazine Through the Knot Hole in Grandpa's Wooden Leg.

Listen, children, hold your breath and close your eyes I beg, And I will tell you what I saw thro' grandpa's wooden leg. I saw the sun sink in the west, the old sink in the shed, I saw the mill-race in the brook, and cabbage got ahead.

CHORUS.

'Twas only a little knot-hole that once had been a limb, And grandpa's let me look through it as it never bothered him. When'er he sat out on the porch I'd sit upon a keg, And many pretty sights I saw thro' grandpa's wooden leg.

AN HONEST GRAFTER

A Glimpse Into the Future of Municipal Ownership.

A Thumb Nail Sketch of a "Practical Politician"—The Profile of an All Around "Servant of the People, Who Seen His Opportunities and Took 'Em."

"Honest graft" will reach its highest level when, as predicted by the enthusiasts, the principles of municipal ownership are accepted by New York and the city controls the trolley lines, the electric light and gas works and all the ferries as well as the water-works and the police, the fire and the street departments.

Then such patriots as George Washington Plunkitt, for many years organization leader of the Fifteenth district in New York, will reap rewards of greater magnitude than they have ever been able to gather under the present order of things.

Perhaps you have never heard about Mr. Plunkitt's "honest graft" schemes. He told about them himself in a book published last year, which was introduced by a paragraph indorsing him as a "veteran leader of the organization," signed by its greatest chief.

Plunkitt was sore because there were some objections to graft being made out of the city by men like him, and in the first chapter of his book he uttered a vigorous protest. "Blackmailin' gamblers, saloon keepers, disorderly people, etc.," he admitted to be wrong. That was "dishonest graft."

"But," he added, "there's an honest graft, and I'm an example of how it works. I seen my opportunities and I took 'em."

Mr. Plunkitt's explanation of how he did these things will illuminate the possibilities of future municipal ownership days, if they ever come.

After elucidating the ways he was "tipped off" at various times by members of his party—the party in power—when new bridges, new parks, new streets were to be opened, so that he might invest in real estate likely to rise in price from the improvements contemplated, he adds: "I haven't confined myself to land. Anything that pays is in my line." Then he gives a specific instance:

"Learning that the city was about to repave a certain street and so would have several hundred thousand old paving blocks to sell, he was 'on hand to buy,' and he 'knew just what they were worth.' But a newspaper 'tried to do him' and got some outside men from Brooklyn and New Jersey to bid against him. Mr. Plunkitt's own words tell the story best:

"Was I done? Not much. I went to each of the men and said, 'How many of those 250,000 stones do you want?' One said 20,000, and another wanted 15,000, and another wanted 10,000. I said, 'All right; let me bid for the lot, and I'll give each of you all you want for nothing.'"

"They agreed, of course. Then the auctioneer yelled, 'How much am I bid for these fine pavin' stones?'"

"Two dollars and fifty cents," says I. "Two dollars and fifty cents!" screamed the auctioneer. "Oh, that's a joke. Give me a real bid."

"He found the bid was real enough. My rivals stood silent. I got the lot for $2.50 and gave them their share. That's how the attempt to do Plunkitt ended, and that's how all such attempts end."

It is hardly necessary, in the light of this authentic statement of "honest graft" workings, to enlarge upon the extended opportunities that would come to the men of the Plunkitt stamp were the dream of municipal ownership to come true. Plunkitt says "most politicians who are accused of robbin' the city get rich the same way" he did.

"They didn't steal a dollar from the city. They just seen their opportunities and took them."

While in the legislature Plunkitt introduced the bills that provided for the outlying parks of New York, the Harlem river speedway, the Washington bridge, the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street viaduct, additions to the Museum of Natural History and many other important public improvements. He is now a millionaire. Under the proposed order of things, with city control of everything, he might become a billionaire.

Under municipal ownership of all public utilities in New York—and in most other cities in fact—politicians like Plunkitt, who at different times has been elected state senator, assemblyman, county supervisor and alderman by his fellow citizens, besides serving as police magistrate for one term, and who boasts of his record in filling four public offices in one year and drawing salaries from three of them at the same time, would flourish like a whole grove of green bay trees.

Go Slow on City Ownership.

Until politics in America is purified far beyond its present condition any large experiment in government ownership may be called a "thief breeder" with much safety. The more authority there is vested in the hands of politicians (with all due deference to our national administration) the more corruption there will be. It is a short-sighted citizen who would take more business out of private hands and commit it to the tender mercies of the politicians.—Troy Press.

Another Plant Abandoned.

After many years' trial of its municipal electric lighting plant Alexandria, Va., has finally leased the works to a private corporation for a period of thirty years. The lessee paid $3,500 for the plant, which had cost the city $17,000.

A Mother's Argument.

"The most to be regretted act of my life," says a commander of the navy, "was a letter I wrote to my mother when about seventeen years of age. She always addressed her letters to me as 'my dear boy.' I felt at that time I was a man, or very near it, and wrote saying that her constant addressing me as a 'boy' made me feel displeased. I received in reply a letter full of reproaches and tears. Among other things, she said: 'You might grow to be as big as Goliath, as strong as Samson and as wise as Solomon; you might become ruler of a nation or emperor of many nations, and the world might revere you and fear you, but to your devoted mother you would always appear in memory in your innocent, unpretentious, unself conceited, unpampered babyhood. In those days when I washed and dressed and kissed and worshiped you, you were my idol. Nowadays you are becoming part of a gross world by contact with it, and I cannot bow down to you and worship you, but if there are manhood and maternal love transmitted to you, you will understand that the highest compliment that mother love can pay you is to call you "my dear boy."'"

Some Old Time Giants.

Cajanus, a Swedish giant who was nine feet high, was on exhibition in London in 1742, and several old handbills still exist which set forth the measurements of this freak of nature. Thirty years later we have Charles Byrne, who was eight feet four inches in height in his stockinged feet. He, however, died young, at the age of twenty-two, from hard drinking. Cotter O'Byrne, another Irish giant, followed a few years later. He was born at Kinsale in 1761 and at the age of fifteen was eight feet high. This by the time he was twenty-three had increased to nine feet four inches, and then he changed his name to O'Brian in order to make people think that he was descended from King Brian Borohme and went on exhibition. At that business he, of course, soon realized a very comfortable fortune and retired, dying at Clifton on Sept. 8, 1804. His will especially provided that his body should be thrown into the sea in order to prevent the surgeons from cutting it up.

No Rhyme For Tipperary.

A poet once jumped to the conclusion that there was no rhyme to Tipperary and said so, whereupon an indignant Irishman, who chanced also to be a bit of a versifier, pounced upon him and poked fun at him in a lengthy poem, every other line of which rhymed or was supposed to rhyme with the place in question. Thus:

A bard there was in sad quandary To find a rhyme for Tipperary. Long labored he through January. Yet found no rhyme for Tipperary; Told every day in February; But told in vain for Tipperary; Searched Hebrew text and commentary, But searched in vain for Tipperary. And so on through many scores of stanzas, ending up with:

He paced about his aviary, Burnt in despair his dictionary, Blew up sky high his secretary, And then in wrath and anger swore he There was no rhyme for Tipperary.

Glasses and the Eyes.

Every one knows that in using a field glass it is necessary to adjust it to a proper focus. Suppose that you put one of the tubes at your focus and the other tube at a focus that suited some one else and then you looked through both tubes. You would have a more or less blurred vision, and if you kept on looking the chances are that you would feel giddy and get a headache. Now, the two eyes are supposed to have an equal natural focus, and when by any chance that focus is unequal a headache results. The remedy is a pair of glasses or a single glass to make the eyes equal in power.

The Danes.

The Danes, or Northmen, first became prominent in European history in 793, when they began to ravage the north coast of France and southern shores of Great Britain. The daring of these hardy seamen was remarkable, for in their small ships they even penetrated the Mediterranean and became terrors to the seaboard population of Italy, Sicily and Greece. The first king of Denmark is said to have been Skjold, 60 B. C.

All It Needed.

"I made this potato salad for you myself," smiled she. "Isn't it delicious?"

"It would be," assented her husband. "If you had put a little more oil and vinegar and pepper and mustard seed and horseradish in the dressing and introduced a sliced egg or two and a few white onions and left half of the potatoes out."

Tolerance in Japan.

Westerners seem to find it inconceivable how the Japanese can maintain allegiance to different creeds at one and the same time. One broad explanation of this is that we as a nation are tolerant in mind, especially in matters pertaining to religion.—Japan Times of Tokyo.

The Wrong Jam.

Haskell—What's Bobby crying for? Mrs. Haskell—Oh, the poor boy caught his finger in the pantry door. Haskell—H'm! He evidently didn't get the jam he was looking for that time.—Pick-Me-Up.

Getting Back at Him.

Hewitt—I got even with the doctor who vaccinated me. Jewett—How did you do it? Hewitt—He ran for office, and I scratched him.

Four Dycusburg boys, Otis Hornback, Frank Ramage, Herman Martin and Jas. Towery went to Paducah last week for an examination for the U. S. army. Otis and Frank failed in the examination one weight and the other on eyesight, but the other two went to St. Louis.

John Patton and wife visited their relatives near Cookseyville.

We see through the reading of our papers that many people are predicting the coming of the end of time, they say that all this cloudy rainy weather are signals of the coming. While we know that many things are being fulfilled in various and divers of places, yet there are many more things spoken of in the Bible which shall be fulfilled for God says there shall not one jot or tittle pass till all those things be fulfilled.

We are informed that our good friend J. D. Worley sold his farm for a good price recently—almost. As we heard it a gentleman dropped into Mr. Worley Tuesday and called for the man of the house the stranger said he wanted to buy a farm so Mrs. Worley invited him to wait her husband's return. When Mr. Worley came home they looked over his farm and the stranger expressed himself as well pleased with the place and they soon agreed on the terms. They were to go to town the next day to fix up the deed and close the sale but it rained so hard they could not get off. Saturday was the same the next day and not until Friday a. m. was there a rift in the clouds that promised them a chance to get to Marion accordingly, Mr. Worley geared his horses up to carry them to town while he was so engaged the stranger sauntered off to take another look at the place and presumably he is still sauntering as Mr. Worley has not seen him since a party answering his description was seen passing Zach Terry that morning. The moral of this story is that prospective buyers of real estate had better bring their credentials with them when they call on J. D. Worley, for fear their call might result in a funeral.

Miss Reed of Henderson is the guest of Mrs. Lester Terry. Our school will close next Friday with appropriate exercises.

SHADY GROVE

Admiral Davis called at the Governor's headquarters and waited fifteen minutes for the appearance of the Governor and requested the Governor's aide to tell the Governor that in consequence of his attitude in not desiring American aid he had countermanded President Roosevelt's order dispatching the supply ship Celtic laden with beef, for the relief of Kingston.

After a brief private meeting the Admiral and Governor exchanged salutations and Admiral Davis took his departure.

The American hospital was established in Winchester Park, Thursday under the American flag and rendered valuable assistance to the many wounded and work was continued up to the last moment, when they hauled down the flag, the Jesuits taking charge, and returned to their ships, the Yankton sailing at 1 o'clock, followed by the battleships at 4.

Gov. Swettenham and the local medical men were greatly opposed to American hospital and insisted that there was no necessity for it.

Last night the streets of the burned district still reeked with the stench of decaying bodies.

Food is coming into the city from the country districts, but a famine is greatly feared.

The Admiral reports there was no tidal wave and that the fire which followed the earthquake reached even the remote portion of the suburbs.

LONDON REGRETS.

London, Jan. 21.—The morning newspapers all regard the incident culminating in the withdrawal of the American warships from Kingston as most unfortunate and regrettable, but several of them refrain from speaking editorially pending further information, evidently being desirous to carefully avoid anything calculated in the slightest to jeopardize the friendly feeling between the United States and Great Britain. They all, however, reiterate expressions of gratitude for the invaluable services of the American surgeons and landing parties.

The total known number of dead is about 450, and it is believed there are at least 150 persons who have not been accounted for.

Today many bodies were recovered through the aid of vultures. As fast as the bodies are recovered they are thrown on the funeral pyre and slowly consumed.

TOM McLEAN SHOT AND KILLED BY ED RUTTER

Wednesday at about 11 o'clock, m. Tom McLean, colored was shot and instantly killed by Ed Rutter also colored, in the rear of Klymans' saloon. Very little is known as to how the killing took place as many conflicting rumors are in the air. McLean was hit near the heart and died without a struggle and never spoke a word. He was in company with Jim Canada and Simon McCain who, with him composed the Marion String Band.

The latter trio claim there was not a word spoken to cause Rutter to kill McLean. Rutter on the contrary claims the other three negroes set on him and were trying to kill him and he shot in self defense.

An open knife, identified as the property of Tom McLean, was found on the ground and Rutter claims to have cuts on his arm and clothes to show that he was attacked. He also has several bruises where he claims to have been struck.

He came in with his brother last Sunday night at 11 o'clock and surrendered and is now in jail.

His examining trial is set for next Thursday, Jan. 31st. He has retained the Hon. A. C. Moore to defend him.

The Romance of Mining

THIRTY-ONE years ago this coming spring, a miner of the name of Mose Manuel, and his brother Fred, found some rich float near what is now Lead, South Dakota. The brothers and their partner, Henry Harney, searched diligently for the lode, but, the snow being on the ground, they were baffled in their efforts to locate the wealth. When the snow had disappeared, Mose was for renewing the search. His partners, with their old hopes cooled, laughed and scoffed at him.

Mose was dogged. He kept at his partners until Harney agreed to accompany him on a search. They looked over the ground, as only miners can, for many days—and at last, up on the hillside, Mose Manuel located the lode.

"Hank," he cried, boyishly, in the joy of his success and the light of his experience, "this is surely a homestake!" Calmer inspection proved to them that the mine was, beyond the shadow of a doubt, a homestake—the term, in miners' parlance, meaning enough money to take them all "back to the States." So they called it the Homestake mine.

For a year the Manuel boys and their partner worked the property; then they sold out to the late United States Senator George Hearst, and he developed the Homestake into one of the richest gold mines the world has ever known.

Last year the discoverer of the lode met his death, as a common miner, in the bottom of a deep shaft in a mine in Montana, his lamp starting an explosion.

The history of American mining, since the days of the argonauts, is full to the bursting point with stories every whit as romantic as that woven about the name of Mose Manuel.

When W. A. Clark, Senator from Montana, first set foot in the copper state, he was so shy of this world's goods that he had to peddle the few wares that his limited capital enabled him to buy. By getting corners on provisions and tobacco, he was able to reap enormous prices, and after a few years of such business found himself in a position to invest in mines. One of the first purchases was a mine that was represented to him as being rich in silver and gold. He got it at a bargain, and he was repenting at leisure, when a stranger walked up to him and asked if he was the owner of "Clark's Colusa," the name the future Senator's chaffing companions had given his worthless hole in the ground. Clark started to order up drinks for the stranger as he had been in the habit of doing for his friends whenever they mentioned his mine, but the stranger would have none of the liquor.

"You have the richest thing in all Montana," he exclaimed, in all seriousness. "Let me congratulate you." This was too much for Clark's good nature.

"There is not an ounce of gold or silver in the old hole," he replied, with that piercing sharpness of voice for which he is noted.

"No," said the stranger, ignoring the owner's rising anger, "there is neither gold nor silver in the Colusa. But there is copper—and enough of it to put you among the richest men of your day."

And so W. A. Clark came into his millions and the title of "Copper King," simply because he had bought a "salted" hole in the ground and nobody was fool enough to take it off his hands.

The man who located the United Verde Mine, in Arizona, the richest copper mine ever discovered, is now a pensioner of Senator Clark's, the latter owning the property.

The year before Mose Manuel discovered the Homestake lode, John Boyd and two partners, hearing, in Nevada, of gold discoveries in the Tonta basin of Arizona, headed thither. Penetrating to the top of the Bradshaw mountains after many hardships and close calls from the Indians, they found ground rich in both gold and silver, took out rock that carried $100 in silver and $35 in gold, and staked out seven claims.

They held the property for a half dozen years, when they sold, Boyd, the leader of the venturesome trio getting ten thousand dollars as his share of the purchase price.

Years later, Boyd, an old, old man, drifted back to the site of his discovery, now known as Jerome, to find more wealth, in the shape of copper ore, being taken from the mine in a day than he and his partners took from it during the entire period that they owned it.

The three men who bought the mine of Boyd and his partners worked out the pocket of gold and silver ore in a few years. They were endeavoring to locate the permanent vein, when W. A. Clark appeared on the scene, having been attracted to Jerome by viewing, at an exposition in the late eighties, specimens of the mine's copper ore. In the first years of his experience as a mine owner, Mr. Clark's practical knowledge of mining had been nil. But he had attended the Columbia School of Mines, New York, in order to overcome this handicap. He went down into the bowels of the United Verde, with his own hands, took out numerous specimens of the ore, assayed them himself, and before he had bought the property knew for a certainty that it was the richest copper mine yet uncovered. The property adjoining the United Verde is now being developed, and before John Boyd, now beyond the middle eighties, passes from his comfortable chair, in the office of his hotel-home, across the great divide, he will doubtless learn of another rich copper mine uncovered in the mineral country that he discovered. The late Marcus Daly became a copper king quite as accidentally as did his bitterest enemy, Senator Clark.

FADS AND FANCIES.

The little tots must have their party frocks as well as the grown ups, and as comparatively few mothers can afford to buy their children frocks ready made, or to have them made up by special dressmakers, the only thing to do is to have them made up at home.

Many mothers find the making up of dainty wear for their little ones a most fascinating occupation, their only concern being as to what it is proper to choose in both material and style. Fortunately there are good patterns to be had, by which exceedingly attractive little frocks may easily be made, and a large variety of lovely inexpensive material from which to choose.

If the frock is to be simply a party frock, and not to do further service, it could be of less expensive material than if it were to be used later on for other wear. This point should be well considered. Sometimes a dress that can be laundered would be the best choice, from an economic standpoint, even though the first cost of material would be more.

However, before purchasing new goods, it might be as well to look over the discarded dresses of the larger girls, as often times these may be cut over into very charming frocks for the little ones.

White and the delicate shades of blue and green, and all the shades of rose are favored, and flowered or figured soft silks and organdies are always dainty and appropriate. Simple lines are smartest, and very little trimming is used, except lace, although hand work is always beautiful and suitable.

Wonderful are these and other romances connected with the mining of copper and iron, gold and silver in America; but the most wonderful of all the romances is that of the Bonanza Kings—Flood, O'Brien, Mackay, and Fair.

At a time when it was the general belief that the Comstock lode was played out, Mackay, the practical, hard-headed miner of the trio, was of the strong opinion that the lode was yet to know its richest days—that it was the biggest bonanza in the whole mining world. He convinced his partners that he was right, and they began to buy up mine after mine on the lode, in spite of the fact that most of the mines that had made the lode famous were "dry holes."

While the rest of the world jeered, the partners went steadily ahead drilling deeper and deeper into the core of the mountains. Everybody had concluded that the four men were fit subjects for a lunatic asylum, when rumor began to go about that in a long deserted drift, and at great depth, the partners had struck gold and silver of unheard-of richness.

A few days later, when the rumor had been verified and the last doubt of the public dispelled, the rush to get stock in the Virginia Consolidated was so great that it has not been surpassed to this day.

The mining and speculative world simply went crazy, and their state of mind was not improved when the partners began taking five million dollars a month out of the lode and counting their monthly profits at three-quarters of a million apiece. In a little over half a decade they took out three hundred million dollars' worth of ore.

To find their bonanza at a depth of twelve hundred feet, they had spent a half million dollars without the quiver of an eye lid. Their faith in themselves had been sublime. Their reward transcended even their most golden dreams by millions on millions.

Unusual Offer of a World Famous Manufacturer

How Mother Earth is Made To Do Your Weekly Wash.

You can now have your washing done by Gravity power, for a washing machine has been invented which actually makes the rotation of the earth on its axis do all the hard work of the weekly wash.

The machine is very simple in construction, very easy in operation and very wonderful in results.

After the dirty clothes are put in the tub of the machine and covered with hot suds, all that is needed to start the work of washing is a slight push of the hand. The strength of a small child would be far more than enough to set the machinery in motion. And, once started, the washer is easily kept going by slight pushes and pulls with your hand. The machine oscillates slightly and you exert but very little strength, because the earth power—Gravity—does all the hard work. You can sit down to do your part, if you prefer.

This wonderful machine is rightly called "a Gravity Washer," because Gravity does practically all your washing.

This Gravity Washer is made only by the world famous 1900 Washer Co., of Binghamton, N. Y., who have patented the machine. And to show you the wonderful work this machine will do, the makers offer to send a Gravity Washer to any responsible party, for a month's FREE trial.

You need not send them any money in advance—make any deposits—or sign any bonds.

All you have to do to obtain the proof that you can be rid of wash day worry and wash day work forever and ever is: write the 1900 Washer Co. that you are willing to try one of their Gravity Washers.

They will send you the Washer at once, all freight prepaid (so you are put to no expense for the trial) and you have only to take the Washer home and use it a month.

The makers ask you to give the washer a thorough test—to wash everything from lace curtains to carpets with it—and if you are not perfectly satisfied, you need not keep the Washer.

This test will cost you nothing. IT IS FREE.

But if you are pleased and satisfied (as you are almost sure to be) the 1900 Washer Co. makes you an even more remarkable offer still.

If you decide to keep the Gravity Washer, after using it a month FREE, you can, if you wish, pay for it by the week or by the month (the makers let you do as you choose about this).

Full particulars of this liberal Guarantee, of the FREE Trial Offer and of the "Pay as it Saves for You" Plan of Selling, may be had by sending your name and address to the General Manager of the 1900 Washer Co.

Address your letter or post card to the General Manager of 1900 Washer Co., Mr. R. F. Bielke, 5036 Henry Street, Binghamton, N. Y.

This lovely frock for girls from 6 to 12 years is of pale rose organdie, full, soft and sheer, with all-over lace for the deep square yoke. A ruffle of the material edged with lace follows the lower edge of the yoke in bertha fashion and gives breadth and modish low shoulder lines. The full gathered skirt has a cluster of tucks above its hem and these tucks, and the hem also, may be hemstitched, to add to the dainty effect. The neck is low and round, and the elbow puff sleeves are frill-finished at the edge, a row of lace bordering the frill. A ribbon sash is tied in a huge rosette bow at the back. This little frock could also be made up in any of the pretty flowered goods, and the yoke could be of the material with rows of insertion. As illustrated, it could be used for a girl of ten years, for two dollars and a half, including cost of pattern (No. 1543), which is ten cents. Even this price may be lessened if the yoke is made of the material with or without lace insertion, instead of the all-over lace.

The pattern is in four sizes—6 to 12 years. Price of pattern, 10 cents.

In this lesson we shall deal mainly with the fitted linings for draped bodies and shirt-waists, as these are usually draped directly on the lining, and the seams of the outer fabric, with the exception of the dart seams, are usually included in the lining seams.

The first step is choosing a pattern. If you want the waist to be of your own designing and different from those for which patterns are procurable; your best plan is to buy a plain lining pattern and utilize it as the foundation upon which to build your ideas.

It sometimes happens that a woman's figure varies somewhat from the fixed measurements upon which paper patterns are cut. She may be shorter or longer in the waist, or shorter from the armhole to shoulder in the back. She can ascertain this by comparing the length of the underarm seam and the back seam of a waist that fits her, with the underarm and the centre back seam of the pattern.

Where such discrepancy of length exists, much trouble may be saved by making the needed alteration in the pattern before cutting the lining. To do this for a figure that is shorter from armhole to waist line fold a narrow tuck straight across the side body, back and underarm piece of pattern at about three inches above the waist line. Measure carefully to see that you have not taken up too large a tuck.

If the figure is longer waisted than the pattern, cut straight through the pattern at three inches above the waist line and separate evenly to the required length.

Many women who have flat, or so-called hollow backs, need to have their waists shortened both above and below the arm's eye. To shorten above the arm's eye take a very small tuck, say an eighth of an inch deep, right across the back below the shoulder line and directly at the center of the armhole curve. This should save making changes in the shoulder seams as such changes frequently mar the contour of the neck line.

CUTTING THE LINING. In cutting the material for the lining, care must be taken, first of all, to have the material doubled and spread smoothly upon a table or cutting board, ready to place the pattern upon it. The pattern should be pinned firmly to the material and the whole fastened to the table by them tacks or with the glass headed push pins; to prevent slipping or other mishap. Then go over the outlines of both edges and seams with the tracing wheel, not forgetting to make all the notches with accuracy and care.

The purpose of having the material double under the pattern is that both sides of the waist lining be cut at once and all the notches and other necessary markings be put into the material before removing the paper pattern from it.

In fitting it is best to make no changes in any seams except the shoulder and under arm seams and in the center seam of the back. The dart seams can also be easily adjusted to the requirements of the figure. Should it be necessary to alter the side back seams, great care must be taken to preserve the shape of the curve.

Use small pins with good points for fitting, and be sure and pin closely in order to get a smooth effect. It is sometimes best to open a seam before pinning an alteration, as the change may be needed more in the front than in the back, or vice versa. Always fit the shoulder seam from the armhole up and the underarm seam from the armhole down.

HOW TO FINISH THE LINING FRONTS AND BACKS FOR LINED WAISTS. After having fitted the lining and having pinned it for necessary alterations, carefully mark where the stitching lines of the various seams will be. This marking may be done with colored thread, or with the tracer, or with chalk; but care must be taken to preserve the marking against erasure or loss.

Now you may rip the seams apart, taking great care to avoid stretching. If you are wise you will cut an exact duplicate of the lining in heavy paper and preserve it for future use. It will save you the labor of basting and fitting future linings.

Remove the pins which mark the turn back of the front edges, place the two fronts together with all edges matching and with the tracer mark through the line of pin marks in order to get the amount of turn-in precisely alike on both sides of front.

A tight fitting lining should always have a stay-piece up each front edge to very nearly the height of the first dart. This stay-piece should be a strip cut on the crosswise grain of the lining material; it is usually based on the wrong side of the lining in such a manner that it is included in the stitching of the darts and of the front edge.

If the waist is to be open in the front, cut two seven-inch lengths of collar or hook-and-eye featherbone and tack them just outside the traced edges of the front from the bottom of the waist up.

Fig. 2. Front edge with stay-piece, turned back and double stitched for hooks and eyes; with tracing threads to mark the stitching lines of darts and seams.

Turn back the edges exactly on the line of tracing and stitch back one-eighth of an inch from the edge, place a second row of stitching three-eighths of an inch back from the first row.

If the edges curve in at the waist line it will be necessary to notch the turned in material before stitching in order to make the hem set smoothly.

Where a back closing is desired follow the same plan of boning turning back the edges, and placing the two rows of stitching illustrated and as described in preparing for front closing.

Our next lesson will teach the proper method of sewing on hooks and eyes, and how to design original effects in pretty waists.

It will tell how some of the most famous New York designers, who get salaries of $5,000 a year, plan their work and how they create novel and artistic ideas. Giving information that is invaluable to the professional as well as the home dressmaker. It is a practical lesson which no woman can afford to miss.
